Needless to say, there are many problems with this. First and foremost, the consensus seems to be that Qt3 is permanently deprecated on Snow Leopard.. Qt4 installs fine, but comes from nokia with a gui-based installer. I will confess that I have little experience building unix apps when dependencies are in nonstandard places, as I usually am discouraged by my lack of understanding how to modify build configuration accordingly.. So, I was wondering if anybody here might be able to help me understand how to properly configure the build environment for qucs-qt4, which seems to be the only path to getting Qucs running on recent versions of the Mac OS.
